How would you curate an exhibition from the Addison’s collection? Cut out the enclosed artworks and experiment with different arrangements to create your own exhibition centered around a theme or telling a story.

More ideas:

- Visit addisongallery.org to print more of your favorites from the Addison’s collection.
- Add your own artwork or cut out pictures from magazines or catalogues.
- Think about how your ideas can be enhanced through labels, the writing that accompanies objects in a museum. Labels are designed to increase the viewer’s understanding of the object, not describe what they can already see.
- You could also write a poem, narrative, or essay that interprets your display.
